NACO, ARIZ., Dec. 28—A company of Mexican-infantry arrived at Naco, Sonora, yesterday afternoon, and, together with the company now stationed at Naco, left last night under the command of Captain Bargaz for a point on the Nacoar railroad, whence it is reported they will go by rail to Nacoar. A train of six coaches of soldiers left Empalme, Sonora, this morning, bound for Nogales, but it is reported on good authority that they will also go to Nacoar.

The trouble is not alarming the many Americans in the Moctezuma district, who are certain their lives and property are to be respected.

SECRETARY NAGLE MAKES ANNUAL REPORT TO THE PRES.

Many Important Recommendations Are Made for Various Changes In the Department of Commerce and Labor.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—Secretary Nagle's annual report, sent to the president today, contains many important recommendations for various changes and improvements in the different bureaus and branches of the department of commerce and labor.

Great popular interest attaches to the immigration and naturalization of aliens, and much of the secretary's report is devoted to that subject.

One of the hardships of the present immigration laws, Secretary Nagle believes, is the separation of families. In many instances a father is admitted and his wife and children are barred out after the pioneer has made a home. The secretary believes that a more equitable system could be found, and says he assumes it is the purpose of the law to keep families together and not to separate them. The secretary suggests that some system by which inquiry should be made about the families of immigrants before the fathers and sons are admitted, should be put into practice. Unless immigration can be diverted from Ellis Island, or reduced, there is need for additions to the facilities there. At no port is there any adequate provision for handling immigrants, declares the secretary, although at most places sites have already been bought by the government for buildings to be used for these purposes.

Stricter regulation of steamship companies in the immigrant traffic is urged in the report and a system of fines for companies which bring insane immigrants or those afflicted with contagious diseases, is proposed. The secretary declares that the immigration officials even find it unwise to allow alien employees of steamships to land on American soil without applying the usual examination to them.

While the fiscal year 1910 brought a total of 1,198,037 immigrants to the United States, the prediction is made that the coming year will approach the banner year 1907, when more than 1,285,000 aliens came in. Of all those who came this year more than 274,000 admitted they had been assisted by friends. All the immigrants carried a total of $28,197,745 with them, a per capita of about $27. The bulk of the immigration continues to be drawn from southern and eastern Europe. Two per cent of all who applied for admission were turned back. They numbered 24,270 in all as against 10,411 in 1909. Though no increase in attempts to import contract labor is apparent, 1700 aliens were deported as such during the year. Stricter legislation to govern that class of immigration is recommended.

Secretary Nagle refers briefly to violations of the white slave law and declares that immigration officials are able to cope with only a fraction of the violations. If the traffic is to be stamped out, he says, the states and municipalities must take a more active interest.

Promotion of employees by merit and not entirely by scholastic examination may be proper when an applicant enters the government service. The conditions within the service, however, he thinks, call for an entirely different test for promotion.

"Employees work under the direction and observation of chiefs of bureaus and divisions and their capacity, efficiency and resourcefulness are judged by them," says the secretary. "In the final analysis their rights to advancement should be wholly determined by the opinions of these supervising officials, provided such opinions are well informed, judicious and conscientiously reached."

Secretary Nagle puts himself on record in favor of some sort of superannuation or retirement for clerks. He believes compulsory retirement for age or disability would be an economical measure for the government and expresses the opinion that if salaries of clerks are to remain as they are, the government can afford to provide straight pensions without contributions from its employees.

The work of the bureau of corporations has been highly important during the year, and probably this month a comprehensive report on its investigation of the lumber industry will be completed. The bureau now has under way investigations of the International Harvester company, the steel and tobacco industries, concentration of water power ownership, and corporate taxation.

Secretary Nagle believes the value of corporation publicity has been proved.

"There should be," he says, "an active and permanent system of publicity under the federal government, by which all important industrial corporations engaged in interstate commerce shall report to one federal agency the essential facts of their business. Federal action of this sort is necessary because no state system can comprehensively cover the subject. Thus, with a central agency of business information in continuous operation, the country would have reliable information on the management of our commercial forces, public opinion would be afforded a basis of intelligent action, unjust prejudice would be removed, and business interests would have a source of information on corporate facts covering the entire country. There would be a permanent and recognized point of contact between the government and the managers of corporations. The relations of corporate action to public interest could be considered, co-operation could be increased, and uniformity of corporate accounting could be secured."

In reviewing the work of the bureau of fisheries, Secretary Nagle proposed a protected zone for all fur bearing animals, and would have it located in the Aleutian islands. Fox and other fur bearing animals have been generally slaughtered there, the bureau of fisheries has found, and many of the animals have been poisoned by aliens who wanted their skins. The secretary recommends that some part of the islands be made a reservation and that a wireless station be installed at Dutch Harbor, or Unalaska, and also on the Pribilof islands. Revenue cutters would be able to operate to greater advantage against pelagic sealers if they had wireless equipment, the secretary says.

Other portions of the report review at length the year's work in the bureau of the census, bureau of labor, bureau of manufactures, bureau of statistics, bureau of standards, light house service and coast and geodetic survey.

Secretary Nagle recommends laws which will permit a closer inspection of steamships and a stricter regulation of their operation, which would be conducive to the greater safety of passengers.

GOV. DICKERSON HAS GREAT SANTA CLAUS EXPERIENCE

CARSON CITY, Dec. 28—Had it not been for the prompt action of bystanders, the governor of Nevada might have been one of the victims of the Christmas tree, which annually numbers many dead from burns. As it was, Governor Dickerson, in the temporary role of Santa Claus on Saturday night, was slightly burned at the executive mansion.

The governor was robed in the conventional Santa Claus suit with furs and robes, flowing whiskers and cotton batting "snow," and was distributing presents to his children and those of the neighbors. As he leaned over the tree to get a present a small taper ignited the cotton on his cap, and instantly there was a kindling of flames.

Those near by snatched off the burning cloth and extinguished the flames before much damage was done.

The governor is now waiting for his eyebrows and eyelashes to grow and the children have some doubts as to the authenticity of Santa Claus.
